With the return to in-person instruction after the disruption of the pandemic, special focus was placed on art as a catalyst for social/emotional learning and development. Programs were further tailored to enhance school engagement and attendance as well as outcomes for English Language Learners. All but one culminating exhibit (via Zoom in February 2022) was offered in-person, as parents and families were finally allowed back in schools. Students exhibited and celebrated their work with an invited audience of peers, teachers, family, and CAW staff.

Other program services include development of new initiatives as well as CAW's fourth core program, Community Art-making. These projects engage youth with their families as part of larger public events with community partners. Art-making aligns with and enhances our partners' goals for youth and community engagement. In FY22, CAW saw the return to four in-person community art-making events, serving 275 participants.
